

The Correlational Method

- Both variables are measured to study whether there is a relationship between the variables.
- No variables are manipulated.
- Direction of cause and effect problem:
You do not know which variable caused the other.
- Third-variable problem:
Some uncontrolled third variable may be responsible for the observed relationship between the variables.