Theories

• Organize and explain existing data.

• Lead to insights that generate new studies and new data.

• Are supported when new data are consistent with the theory.

• Must be revised when new data are collected that reveal weaknesses in the theory.

• May be replaced by newer theories that provide better explanations for data.